GM to invest $20 million in Romulus

The Romulus GM Powertrain plant entertained a special visitor recently who brought quite a gift with her.

Mary Barra, GM CEO, visited the Romulus plant just ahead of the announcement of a $20 investment in the propulsion facility.

"Romulus has a long-standing reputation of quality, productivity and performance, and we are proud of the hard work and commitment displayed by the entire Romulus team, Barra said in a statement.

"GM's investment in Romulus will enable the plant to continue playing an important role in our core business going forward," she added.

> The UAW fully supports this $20 million investment at the GM Romulus plant and encourages more of this in the future.

The Romulus plant, open since 1976, will continue to produce V-6 and 10-speed transmissions used in several GM cars, trucks and crossover vehicles.

The investment will allow the propulsion plant to increase capacity for 10 speed transmission products, a corporate spokesman noted.

Barra visited the plant to meet with employees and community leaders recently to stress that GM is committed to U.S. manufacturing. GM has been criticized recently for the decision to close five plants in North America affecting 6,200 jobs.

The $20 million in Romulus will be used to buy more machines to expand transmission capacity although no time line for the change was announced.

"The UAW fully supports this $20 million investment at the GM Romulus plant and encourages more of this in the future. We in the UAW look forward to more investments like this in the future so GM can build where they sell," stated a prepared release from the offices of the United Auto Workers, the union that represents the estimated 1,350 workers at the Romulus plant.

The Romulus plant has been open since 1976 and has been building engines in the 1980s, according to GM and has produced more than 10.8 million V8 engines and more than 6.6 million V6 engines, according to GM.

Scottish dancers compete at Plymouth arts complex

Julie Brown
Staff Writer

The sound of Scottish bagpipes filled the halls of the Plymouth Arts and Recreation Complex recently along with the sound of gently landing feet.

Those traditional Scottish bagpipes accompanied 85 contestants in the Highland Dance Competition which took place at the Plymouth complex Jan. 20.

Competitor Rose Johnson, 12, was encouraged in her dance pursuit her parents Melissa and Tim Wandrey, all of Burton.

"We love this. She was 4 1/2 when she started. She loves it, though," said Melissa Wandrey.

"Instead of playing video games it teaches them about nutrition, muscle building. It also teaches them to work with their peers, social skills," Tim Wandrey added.

"The Highland people were very superstitious. They would perform this dance before going into battle. They would be victorious in the next upcoming battle if they didn't touch the sword while dancing, Highlanders believed. They do this dance in like two minutes," he said.

Some 285 dance steps are memorized for the competitions. "It takes energy, strength and coordination to be able to perform their dances," Wandrey explained. "The dance is the equivalent to Michael Phelps swimming an Olympic race," citing research done by nutritionists.

The Jan. 20 dance competition in Plymouth drew 85 participants, some of whom began to compete at age 4.

The enthusiasm for dances of Scotland was evident at the competition.

Plymouth resident Cindy Kopenski is the teacher liaison for the sponsoring Midwest Highland Dance Association.

"They need somebody who has that background. I've been dancing since I was 12," said Kopenski, who couldn't be a judge that day as she had students competing.

"It's just like any other sport. People have to stay hydrated, they have to eat right," said Kopenski. She advised one participating mom, "She (the young dancer) is going to benefit immensely by being more confident in school. They're (participating youth) not afraid to do a book report.

"It is fun. I would not trade any of the friendships I've made over the years," she said.

Kopenski is planning to visit Philadelphia, and will meet people from Scotland while there.

The Midwest Highland Dance Association is among six regions.

"The Canadians can come, too," she said. "We had dancers from London, Ontario, Denver, Colorado, and Madison, Wisconsin" at the recent competition in Plymouth. The Midwest division has 347 dancers and about 10 percent are male, she said. The dancers begin to compete at age 4 and the upper age limit varies, Kopenski added.

More information about the group and competitions is available at www.fusta.us or www.discoverscottishdance.com.

Canton responds to 'bad day' lawsuit

Canton Township Corporate Counsel Kristin Kolb issued a statement last week in response to a $25 million lawsuit filed against two emergency dispatchers claiming they deliberately ignored 911 calls leading to the death of a heart attack victim.

Kolb prefaced her statement with an expression of sympathy for the family of 69-year-old Stephen Greene of Belleville who died March 2. Greene had been a patient at the Heartland Health Care Center in Canton since Feb. 27, 2018 after a nine-day hospital stay for "altered mental status secondary to marked hypoglycemia," according to the court filings.

The lawsuit, filed Feb. 18 on behalf of Greene's widow, Dorothy, and his estate, is seeking damages from dispatchers Rachel Rowell and Joshua Choroba claiming that the medical staff at the rehabilitation center could not get help for her husband despite calling 911 more than 13 times on March 1, 2018. The lawsuit claims that Rowell deliberately turned the volume off on the phone line "because she was having a bad day." Her comment was overheard by another dispatch worker, according to the lawsuit filed in Wayne County Circuit Court by attorney John Marko. He questioned the number of other calls for emergency service that could have been missed during the time the system was turned off, variously estimated at between 8 minutes and 1½ hours.

> The actions of the responsible named former employees are inconsistent with the training, policies and practices of the Canton Department of Public Safety.

The lawsuit states that the delay in medical treatment was a factor in Greene's death and Marko claims that a doctor who reviewed the medical records has validated that claim.

According to Kolb's statement, the missed calls were reported to a supervisor the same morning they occurred and an internal investigation was immediately launched into the actions of Rowell and Choroba. Choroba allegedly took over from Rowell at a shift change and neglected to turn the phone system volume back to an audible level.

Kolb said the situation led to an 8-minute delay while the lawsuit claims there was a period of 1 ½ hours of service failure. She said Canton Township immediately launched an internal investigation into the actions of the dispatchers and that investigation led to the suspension of both Rowell and Choroba. According to Kolb, Rowell has been charged with willful neglect of duty by the office of the Wayne County Prosecutor, based on the findings of the township investigation.

"The actions of the responsible named former employees are inconsistent with the training, policies and practices of the Canton Department of Public Safety. Additionally, corrective measures have been put in place, and further measures continue to be evaluated by the department to prevent an incident such as this from occurring again," Kolb said in her statement.

"These emergency operators unbelievably and alarmingly decided to turn off the 911 dispatch phone so that they did not have to do the job they had sworn and gotten paid to do; one dispatcher stating she did so because she was having a bad day. Her day was not as bad as ... Stephen Greene's," Marko wrote in the court filings.

Registry aids those seeking cancer treatment

Julie Brown
Staff Writer

Love motivated Mary Tavana to take on one of the most formidable medical opponents known: cancer.

Tavana's love for her sister-in-law, Kay, prompted her to seek bone marrow donor help by supporting a local registry for a national bone marrow donor list.

Kay Tavana was diagnosed in 2007 with a blood disorder. Doctors monitored and treated her until late November 2018, when she was diagnosed with acute leukemia. She spent a month in the hospital where she received a week of chemotherapy, and then was monitored to see if the cancer had been killed.

Her numbers looked good, Mary Tavana said, but just before she was scheduled to come home, the doctors saw some cancer cells start to return.

Kay Tavana went home for a month, and then went back into the hospital on Feb. 14. She is receiving another round of chemotherapy to kill the cancer, and then health professionals will do a bone marrow biopsy to see if she is in remission, her sister-in-law said.

"It's getting critical right now," Mary Tavana said of Kay, who is her brother's wife. "This disease turned into acute leukemia" after some 10 years of symptoms.

A recent marrow donor registry event at Resurrection Parish of Canton isn't the end of the story. Mary Tavana emphasizes marrow donor registry is ongoing.

Kay Tavana's brother can't donate as he has the same blood disorder. There is no other match in the National Data Base Registry at this time that matches Kay.

The family's seeking people ages 18-44 in good health who are asked to sign up at https://join.bethematch.org/cure29.

> It's getting critical right now. This disease turned into acute leukemia.

The registration page has a few questions and details. Within about five to seven days, a "swab kit" will be mailed to the potential donor's address. The person does the swab test and sends it back for processing. Once processed, it is added to the potential pool of donors in the National Data Base Registry.

Mary Tavana adds there are thousands of people at any given time desperately searching for a genetic match. For more information, Tavana can be reached at (734) 634-7558.

"Anytime is good to be doing this," Tavana said of the match procedure. She's a Canton Township resident who formerly lived in Westland, and worships at Resurrection Parish.

Leukemia is cancer of the body's blood-forming tissues, including the bone marrow and the lymphatic system, the website of the Mayo Clinic in Minnesota states. Many types of leukemia exist. Some forms of leukemia are more common in children. Other forms of leukemia occur mostly in adults, according to Mayo Clinic staff. Leukemia usually involves the white blood cells. White blood cells are potent infection fighters - they normally grow and divide in an orderly way, as the body needs them. But in people with leukemia, the bone marrow produces abnormal white blood cells, which don't function properly.

Treatment for leukemia can be complex - depending on the type of leukemia and other factors. But there are strategies and resources that can help to make treatment successful, the Mayo Clinic website notes.

Both websites emphasize the importance of seeing a physician early, as well as getting support from family and friends if diagnosed with any type of cancer.

For Kay Tavana, that's been vital, including her two cats being nearby. "They just love her and missed her so much" when she was hospitalized, said Mary Tavana.

The American Cancer Society notes 2.6 million lives saved from cancer since 1991, thanks to prevention, improved methods of early detection, and better treatment options.

Woman admits pouring bleach on boyfriend

Don Howard
Staff Writer

The office of the Wayne County Prosecutor last week denied a warrant request for aggravated felony assault against a woman who reportedly poured bleach in her boyfriend's eyes during a domestic dispute.

According to reports from the Plymouth Township Police and Fire departments, emergency crews were dispatched to 49635 Pine Dr. at 5:45 p.m. on Monday, Feb. 19 in response to a report of a domestic assault. While en route, officers were advised a male and female were involved in a physical altercation. Minutes later the alleged victim reported his girlfriend had brandished a dagger and that there was a 4-year-old child at the residence.

When police arrived on the scene, they found Jordan Allan Green standing outside his girlfriend's mobile trailer bleeding from the forehead and holding his glasses, which were missing a lens. He told the responding officers that his eyes were burning from bleach poured on him by Rebekah Lee Bickes. Bickes admitted to officers that she had poured bleach on Green.

According to police reports, the incident began with a verbal altercation in the bedroom of Bickes' trailer home over a missing $10 bill from Green's wallet. In a fit of anger, Green told officers, he smashed a flat-screen television and announced he wanted to break-off the relationship with Bickes with whom he had lived for a year. He told officers the television was his property.

> According to accounts, Bickes became infuriated and threw a remote control at Green and a shoving match ensued.

According to accounts, Bickes became infuriated and threw a remote control at Green and a shoving match ensued. As Green packed his up clothing to leave, according to the incident report, Bickes started pouring a "a significant amount of bleach" over the back of Green's head and onto his clothing from a one-gallon bottle. Bickes also admitted punching and slapping Green in the face "a few times."

Green received medical attention at the scene and photos were taken of his injury, bleached clothing and damaged property. Bickes was transported to the township police station, booked, arrested and then transported to a local hospital by the township fire department. She told police that prior to their arrival she consumed 30 to 40 prescription psychiatric pills and had sliced her left wrist with the dagger.

Police remained on the scene until Bickes' parents arrived and took custody of the child and the couple's mini-van.

Police officials said the warrant request seeking criminal charges against Bickes was refused based on Green's refusal to co-operate, negating the finding of probable cause.

Bickes was released from custody the next day.

Canton Leisure Services wins state honors

Canton Leisure Services recently received special statewide recognition at the 2019 mParks Annual Conference and Trade Show, which took place earlier this month. mParks, a statewide professional association for the Michigan parks and recreation industry, honored Canton Leisure Services with two department awards: 'Innovative Programming Award' for the Summit on the Park Aquatic Center "Pumpkin Patch in the Pool" program, as well as a 'Marketing Award for Best Graphic Design Piece' for the 2018 Canton Farmers Market Season Brochure. In addition, Recreation Specialist Laura Mortier, CPRP, was presented with the 'New Professional Award.'

Mortier was honored as a new professional in the parks and recreation industry for exhibiting outstanding service and promise to Canton Leisure Services, as well as to the mParks organization. Now serving in her second year on the mParks board as a director at large, Mortier continues to make a significant impact on the Canton Community, mParks and in the parks and recreation profession, township officials said.

> I'm confident that her contributions to the parks and recreation industry will also continue to be exemplary and add value wherever she puts her energies...

During the past few years, Mortier has served on several mParks committees, such as: the Youth & Teen Initiatives Committee and Women In Recreation Education & Development (WIRED). She has also leveraged her commitment to the mParks Board and her passion for the parks and recreation field by contributing to the advancement of mParks' initiatives for growing diversity and youth development.

Within the Canton community, Mortier supervisors The B.L.O.C.K. Youth & Teen Center for area youth ages 11-17. She has also launched Lead #LikeAGirl and Be a #ModelMan, two award-winning leadership programs for youth that remain in high demand and receive continuous recognition for their success and innovation.

"Canton Leisure Services is honored to have such a dedicated employee who has been an outstanding member of our team promoting youth initiatives in our community," said Greg Hohenberger, Canton Leisure Services director. "Laura Mortier is one of those individuals who makes a difference in the lives of area youth by fostering a positive environment where teens can find support and encouragement that will serve them as they move forward in life. I'm confident that her contributions to the parks and recreation industry will also continue to be exemplary and add value wherever she puts her energies and attention."

Belleville - Inkster - Romulus

Airport chief values relationship with Romulus

Romulus Mayor LeRoy Burcroff was among those congratulating Chad Newton who was recently appointed as the chief executive officer (CEO) of Wayne County Airport Authority. Newton had been acting as interim CEO at the Detroit Metro Airport since July and has more than 20 years experience working at Detroit Metro. His permanent appointment to the position was approved by members of the Wayne County Airport Authority (WCAA) Board of Directors in December.

"In Romulus, we know firsthand how crucial it is to have good leadership at the Airport Authority. Chad Newton has a proven history of integrity and customer service at WCAA," said Burcroff.

"Since his interim appointment as CEO, we have had unprecedented response to our questions and concerns. We appreciate the Airport Authority as an important community partner and look forward to continuing our strong working relationship with Chad in the future."

The authority operates both Detroit Metropolitan and Willow Run airports.

> Chad Newton

"I look forward to working with such a dynamic and forward thinker as our new CEO Chad Newton," said WCAA Board Chair Nabih H. Ayad, Esq. "With over two decades of serving Detroit Metropolitan Airport, Mr. Newton not only brings experience and leadership to the table, but an understanding of the importance of diversity and inclusion in leveling the playing field for all citizens of this region. Chad simply gets it."

"Safety and security is one of the biggest concerns at any major airport," Newton said. "It is an honor to know the board of directors has confidence in the nearly 30 years I've spent in law enforcement, including 20 years at Detroit Metro Airport. I look forward to using my knowledge and experience as our team continues to improve the customer experience, collaborate with our stakeholders, support small businesses and give back to our community."

Newton is a graduate of the FBI National Academy and certified by the American Association of Airport Executives (AAAE) as an Accredited Airport Executive (A.A.E.). He is one of approximately 500 airport executives in the United States and the first WCAA CEO to hold this title. The A.A.E. certification is the highest level of accreditation granted by AAAE to aviation professionals who have demonstrated their ability to handle the responsibilities of airport management.

Newton echoed Burcroff's comments about the importance of cooperation with Romulus.

"The Wayne County Airport Authority has a great relationship with the City of Romulus, where Detroit Metropolitan Airport is located. We want to be good neighbors; we partner with the city whenever there's an opportunity, from community activities to mutual aid services provided by our Airport Authority Fire Department. Mayor LeRoy Burcroff is a lifelong Romulus resident who is committed to making a difference in his hometown and in this region. We're honored to work alongside him," he said.

Newton is a United States Army veteran who served tours of duty in Seoul, South Korea and Fort Campbell, Kentucky. After being honorably discharged from the Army, Newton joined the Wayne County Sheriff's Department as a deputy sheriff. His duties included patrolling the airport grounds and facilities. In 1999, Newton transitioned to the Wayne County Airport Police Department, where he advanced through the ranks to become WCAA vice president of public safety. He was also assigned the responsibility of overseeing Willow Run Airport. In July 2018, Newton was appointed WCAA Interim CEO.

Highlights of Newton's career at Detroit Metropolitan Airport include successfully managing the January 2017 protest of the United States Presidential Executive Order banning entry into the country and receiving the 2018 TSA Partnership Award. Newton also implemented initiatives to diversify the WCAA Public Safety Division.

A graduate of Eastern Michigan University, Newton holds a bachelor's degree in Criminology and Criminal Justice and a master's degree in Technology Studies with a Law Enforcement specialty.

Lunch is served

Meaningful dialogue, and a lot of good natured fun, is on the menu at the Inkster Commission on Aging and Oak Street Health's Lunch with the Mayor which takes place monthly at the Booker Dozier Recreation Complex, 2025 Middlebelt Road. The commission and Oak Street Health created the monthly event to give community members the chance to engage in meaningful dialogue and ask questions of Mayor Byron Nolen, above right, drawing a winning ticket for seniors at the event last month. Residents are encouraged to attend this free event to voice their concerns and have their questions answered by the mayor. For more information, contact Oak Street Health at (844)808-8262 or the Commission on Aging at (313) 561-2382.

Library board issues bids for Opening Day Collection

The opening of the new Belleville Area District Library will have more to offer local readers than a new, expanded building specifically designed to meet the needs of the tri-community area.

The purchase of a special collection of new books and materials for the library is presently under consideration by the members of the library board of directors. Operating with a budget of $150,000 for the new materials, the board members are considering the purchase of an "Opening Day Collection" that will include popular materials as well as additions to the non-fiction selections.

Library Director Mary Jo Suchy told the board members at their meeting earlier this month that the purpose of the new collection will be to supplement the current collection of materials available to local patrons.

"With the new library, we anticipate a return of our patrons who are using neighboring libraries and we want to make sure that our book and materials collection is up to the task," she told the board members. She noted that the non-fiction collection was specifically in need of updating.

The board has issued a request for proposals for the new materials to supplement the existing collection of 77,000 books and 9,900 audio visual materials. The library board members anticipate moving into the new, two-story, 31,000-square-foot building this fall.

The project cost includes the selection, acquisition, cataloging, processing, storage and delivery of the "Opening Day Collection" which should include adult, juvenile and teen books along with DVDs, music CDs and audio books. Delivery from the vendor is requested in October.

The board members noted in their request for proposals that the contract would be awarded to a single vendor. The contract is expected to be awarded at the March 12 library board meeting.

WAYNE - WESTLAND

One of eight

Distinguished Young Women of Wayne-Westland event tickets on sale

One of eight local teens will have a little extra college money next week.

The 52nd Annual Distinguished Young Women of Wayne-Westland Scholarship Program is planned for 7 p.m. Friday, March 8 at Wayne Memorial High School in Wayne.

Eight contestants from Wayne, Westland and Inkster will compete for thousands of dollars in college scholarships and the chance to represent their community at local events and at the state finals in Canton Township in July. This scholarship program is based on academic scholastics, leadership, physical fitness and talent.

At the local program , contestants will perform an opening number and compete in a talent routine, a physical fitness routine and self expression. Contestants are also evaluated based on academic scholastics and interview.

"This is an amazing group of smart and talented young women and we are excited to have them showcase their talents at our 52nd annual scholarship program.

"We invite the public to come and support these accomplished young women" said Lauren Reed, Distinguished Young Women of Wayne-Westland co-director.

Competing this year are Ebere Bernard, Brooklyn Climer, Jenna Engberts, Shauna Jackson, Susan Lenard, Kyiana Parrom, Ciara Raymond and Andrea Santiago-Lagunas.

Tickets to the event can be purchased from any participant or on the night of the show for $10. All proceeds go toward scholarship awards.

The Wayne-Westland Local Program is part of the Distinguished Young Women of America, which has impacted the lives of more than 765,000 young women since it first began in 1958. The organization mission is to empower high school young women by providing scholarship opportunities, developing self-confidence and teaching crucial life skills needed for success in college and beyond. National sponsors include Mobile County, City of Mobile, Alabama Power Foundation, Encore Rehabilitation, Wintzell's Oyster House, Master Boat Builders, Barbara Barrington Jones Family Foundation, Evonik, Regions Financial Corporation, Jostens and Alabama Media Group.

Wayne sells 2 city parks for home construction

Residents living near two parks in the City of Wayne may soon have some new neighbors.

Last week, members of the city council agreed to sell both Jaycee Park on Annapolis Road and Kiwanis Park on Howe Road to Shafer Development, LLC for the construction of 42 single-family homes on the two sites.

The city will receive $162,000 for the two parks but officials estimate that property taxes from the proposed homes, when complete, could be an estimated $147,000 to $189,000. Shafer Development will contract with a builder to construct the homes which will be priced at about $130,000 to $150,000, according to plans submitted to the city. A small piece of land at the north end of Jaycee Park will remain a public park and some playground equipment may be relocated there, officials said.

Steven Shafer represented Shafer Development at the meeting last week and told council members that he is working with builder Wade Jurney who is comfortable building smaller new homes rather that the larger houses that could be out of reach for first-time new home buyers. Wade Jurney does not have any other projects in Michigan, to date.

"The young buyers are really left out of the market," Shafer told the council members during the meeting. "It's really shifted to the empty-nester now. And with the cost of construction, we think what Wade Jurney is doing, they're coming into Michigan looking for several hundred lots that can be developed."

> Plante Moran (the city auditor) has told us we do not have a spending problem, we have a revenue problem.

The new home developments now need approval from both the city planning commission and city council before construction can begin. Shafer said he hopes the homes will be built and on the market by fall if construction can start this spring.

One council member said the money from the sale of the community parks would be best used to help fund maintenance at the remaining parks in the city and that an ordinance officer could be hired using the funds. He said those two issues have become priorities in the city.

"I think that aspiration rose to the very top above a lot of the concerns and questions that have surrounded this very important decision here," said Councilman Anthony Miller. "I would ask council to consider that as well."

Mayor John Rhaesa said that while money was necessary to fund the city parks, adding an ordinance officer would be problematic since the sale was a one-time funding influx and funding the wages of an officer would need an ongoing revenue stream.

Rhaesa said that the city could be looking at other municipal property to sell in an effort to increase the tax base in the city as residents have repeatedly made their objections to any new tax proposal known.

He said that residents have refused multiple times to approve any new taxes for the cash-strapped community. That situation, he said, necessitates looking for other revenue sources.

"Plante Moran (the city auditor) has told us we do not have a spending problem, we have a revenue problem," Rhaesa said.

Face off

Annual charity hockey game set

Mayor William R. Wild, along with his team of Westland Wild Wings, are once again getting ready to lace up their skates to challenge the Detroit Red Wing Alumni in the 10th Annual Hockey Night in Westland charity event.

The game will take place Friday, March 15 at the Mike Modano Ice Arena located at 6210 N. Wildwood St. in Westland. Doors will open at 5:30 p.m. and at 6 p.m. the Westland Hockey Association Mini-Mites and Mites will take the ice to show off their skills. The alumni pre-game fun will start at 7 p.m. and the puck drop will take place at 7:30 p.m.

This event has become one of the most anticipated events in the community. Tickets for the event are $10 for adults and $5 for children ages 6 to 12. Children 5 and younger are admitted free with an adult.

"Hockey Night in Westland has raised over $200,000 to help fund improvements to the Mike Modano Ice Arena and draws in 800 spectators, annually," stated Wild.

Tickets are available for purchase at the Wild's office at Westland City Hall, the Mike Modano Ice arena and online at https://westland.ticketleap.com/2019-hockey-night/details.

Seating is limited and has been sold out during past events.
